Danger Ahead!

Is there any danger of civil liberty in the United States being overthrown? Yes! George Washington, in his farewell address to his countrymen, said: "The alternate domination of one faction over another, sharpened by the spirit of revenue natural to party dissensions, which, in different ages and countries has perpetrated the most horrid enormities, is itself a frightful despotism. But this leads at length to a more formal and permanent despotism. The disorders and miseries which result, gradually incline the minds of men to seek security and repose in the absolute power of an individual; and soon or later the chief of some prevailing faction, more able or more fortunate than his competitors, turns this despotism to the purposes of his own elevation on the ruins of public liberty."

Abraham Lincoln said: "I see in the near future a crisis arising which unnerve me and causes me to tremble for the safety of my country. As the result of the war corporations have been enthroned and an era of corruption in high places will soon follow, and the money power of the country will endeavor to prolong its reign by working upon the prejudices of the people until all wealth is aggregated in the hands of the few and the republic is destroyed. I feel at this time more anxiety for the safety of my country than ever before, even in the midst of war. God grant that my fears may prove groundless."

We might quote from other eminent Americans, of both old parties, on the subject, and would find that they had lifted up the danger signal and sounded the alarm. When Helper wrote his "Impending Crisis," before the war of the Rebellion, he was considered a visionary and a false prophet. But the conflict came, and the land was deluged in tears and blood.

Like warnings are now being given of an "impressible conflict" between labor and capital, but they are being pooh-poohed and unheeded. The only possible way to check and halt these tendencies of the times is for independent votes to give a lasting and salutary rebuke to both old political parties by bolting their column and voting with the people's party.

Supply and Demand.

Our dear old party friends tell the farmer that farm products are regulated in price by supply and demand.

Let us see. When wheat came into market, there was a short crop in Europe and a famine in Russia. Prices ruled comparatively high at the start and farmers were encouraged to hold their grain for still better prices. What is the result? A constant and steady decline until on Monday, April 4, the Chicago market for wheat was 79 1/4 cents, corn 39, oats 29. These prices are very low when we consider the foreign demand is still brisk.

An eminent jurist and a republican, conversing with your editor on the subject, said: "The fact is supply and demand no longer regulate the price of farm products. They are determined by operations on the board of trade and grain gamblers. They ought to be enactments making it a criminal offense to gamble on the products of the soil."

Cotton is quoted in the New Orleans market on Monday at 5 1/4 cents per pound—the lowest in the last thirty years, and yet any one knows that the amount raised per acre, has, in recent years declined. We will explain how this is brought about.

The cotton product of the country is about 7,000,000 bales annually. The transactions of the New York cotton exchange was 40,000,000 bales annually. The coal oil product is 20,000,000 barrels annually. The New York petroleum exchange reports 2,000,000,000 barrels annually. These figures will explain how easy it is to bear the market and represent that it is overstocked when this is not the case.

We hear it frequently remarked by the would-be-political-economist that the Liverpool markets control New York markets, and New York markets control the Chicago markets, etc. Now put two and two together. England wants to buy cheap and she bears the market, and the New York operators bears the market, the Chicago operator bears the market.

Lombard street controls Wall street, and Wall street the money and produce markets of the United States. English syndicates buy up flouring mills and elevators all along the line at Minneapolis, Chicago and New York. The farmers of this country are as surely under the heel of English tyranny as though we were an British province.

Were Greenbacks Macerated?

In the Rocky Mountain News of April 4, in a special from Washington signed "N—," we find the following fact affirmed: Colonel John Tyler, son of President Tyler, under the Arthur administration was appointed on the committee of the treasury to witness and certify the destruction and maceration of bank notes into pulp. Now while in this article the word bank notes is used, everyone that is at all informed of the doings of the treasury well knows that this is an established institution in the treasury department, and that greenbacks by the millions of dollars and even by the hundreds of millions have been converted into pulp, and that there exists a department of the treasury for this purpose with all the adequate machinery. Yet J. R. Burton the republican Demosthenes denies this fact. Run him for congress by all means.

Representative Watson of Georgia, made a hit in a speech ridiculing the stereotyped tariff speeches of both democrats and republicans. The republicans, he said, declared themselves in favor of protection as a principle and (in order to secure it) reciprocity as a practice. The democrats, according to Mr. Watson, say that free trade as a governmental principle is thoroughly right, but they decline to accept it as a rule of action. He scored the internal revenue laws and brought down the house when he said that at St. Augustine, Fla., it had cost the government $18 to collect 15 cents, and at Annapolis, Md., and Cherry Stone, Va., respectively $952, $1,850 to collect nothing.

On March 31 in the house of representatives the alliance congressmen attempted to get recognition from Speaker Crisp on a motion asking the judiciary committee to report the anti-Pinkerton resolution. Although repeated attempts were made both by Jerry Simpson and Mr. Watson, the speaker would not recognize either. Let laboring men remember this. Let all the railroad employees remember that the people's party in Kansas and the nation stand solid against the Pinkerton army. Put your shoulder to the wheel, fellow laboringman and vote where you have the staunchest friends. Do not be bulldozed nor hoodwinked. Stand for your rights.

At a conference of the farmers' alliance members of the house and a score of other members, in sympathy with them, it was decided to make a determined effort to push through the house a bill which has been prepared by Representative Livingston of Georgia, authorizing the secretary of the treasury to issue legal tender non-interest bearing notes up to $30 per capita, upon the demand of any state, through its governor, the said state to deposit its bonds for the amount so demanded, said bonds to run twenty years and to bear interest at the rate of 1 per cent. It is claimed that already more than fifty members of the house has pledged themselves to support this bill.

We learn that the people's party state convention will be held at Wichita, June 15, to nominate a state ticket and elect delegates to the national convention at Omaha. At these gatherings there will be great enthusiasm and the esprit du corps that presages of victory.
